ANNA-EVA BERGMAN

Paintings 1977 - 1987

June 28 > August 23, 2014

Jérôme Poggi is pleased to announce the exceptional exhibition that the gallery will devote to the French-Norwegian artist Anna-Eva Bergman (1909-1987) during the entire summer of 2014, denoting upon the same occasion the first five years of the gallery and its recent move opposite the Centre Pompidou.

This exhibition, the first in Paris in almost twenty years, will regroup a rare set of fifteen works carried out between 1977, date of her major retrospective at the Musée d'Art Moderne de la Ville de Paris, and 1987, year of her death.

Organized in exclusive partnership with the Fondation Hans Hartung / Anna-Eva Bergman, and with the support of the Royal Embassy of Norway, the exhibition will be the occasion for a public round table Thursday, 26 June 2014, organized at the official residency of the Ambassador of Norway (upon obligatory reservation). It will bring together a panel of art critics and historians (Elisabeth Lebovici, Catherine Gonnard, Henri-Claude Cousseau, Franck Claustrat, Christine Lamothe).

Curators of the exhibition: Jérôme Poggi and Christine Lamothe, responsible for the work of Anna-Eva Bergman at the Fondation Hartung – Bergman (Antibes)

Born in 1909, twice married to Hans Hartung with whom she experienced a passionate relationship throughout their lives, Anna-Eva Bergman has profited for several years now from a significant increase in critical and artistic importance. Given she had been recognized during her lifetime, representing for example Norway in the Sao Paulo Biennale in 1969 and honored by a major retrospective at the Musée d'Art Moderne de la Ville de Paris in 1977, her work had remained marginal for a long time in the eyes of the critics and historians. Apart from the fact that she was a woman artist and the wife of an artist at a time when art history was essentially a man's domain, it's above all the uniqueness of her work and of her artistic trajectory that had partially hidden its importance with an essentially progressive approach to art history following the war. As Annie Claustres described it, "the remarkable body of work of Anna-Eva Bergman [...] does not fit within the linear history of the avant-gardes. The use of materials, such as gold and/or silver leaf combined with that of paint, and an attachment to the symbolic position of revealing a metaphysical conception to landscape, offsets it in relation to the major aesthetic challenges of the 20th century."

It's undoubtedly the reason why her work so resonates on the contemporary art scene where she is often confronted with living artists' works. Situated just there where "abstraction meets nature" as the art historian Ole Henrik Moe has emphasized, her body of work is striking indeed by its contemporaneity as well as its universality.

ANNA-EVA BERGMAN

(Stockholm 1909 - Grasse 1987)

The work of Anna-Eva Bergman, Norwegian and French painter, is located outside the domain of art history as envisaged within a progressive concept based on the succession of artistic avant-gardes. The use of materials such as gold and/or silver leaf combined with that of painting and a commitment to the symbolic reveal a metaphysical concept of the landscape and puts it out of step with the major aesthetic challenges of the 20th century. Recognized during her lifetime, and nevertheless held in a marginal position, her work raises renewed interest, artistic as well as critical.

Following artistic studies in Oslo and in Vienna, Anna-Eva Bergman came to Paris in 1929 where she followed for some time André Lhote's courses. She met Hans Hartung whom she married only a few months after their meeting. At the end of the 1920s and during the 1930s her work was made up essentially of drawings, watercolors and caricatures at the same time naïve, full of humor and a social or political critique sometimes fierce in the run-up to the war. She separated a first time from Hans Hartung in 1937, and then returned to live in Norway. The war years were to be a period of intellectual training for Bergman. She studied philosophy, literature and architectural laws, all the while carrying out work as an illustrator for publishing and press.

She took up painting again at the beginning of 1946 and towards the end of the 1940s carried out a large number of abstract works. Then, very quickly, she found the plastic language that is significant of her work, profoundly inspired by her Norwegian culture and her observation of the vast Nordic landscapes that she discovered while travelling to the north of Norway and to the Lofoten isles, on the frontier of Russia. In 1952 she rejoined Hartung in Paris whom she remarried in 1957.

From 1952 to 1987, she explored a singular pursuit and managed to create modern icons, images of absence, more and more marked by a form of incarnate minimalism that certain critics tie easily to the American painting of Mark Rothko or Barnett Newman, rather than the Ecole de Paris. The Galerie de France consecrated a first one-woman show to her work in 1958. The 1960s were to be those of development in her artistic career: exhibition in 1966 at the Kunstnernes Hus in Oslo; in 1967, at the Galleria Civica in Turin; in 1969, she represented Norway in the Sao Paulo Biennale. A retrospective in 1977-1978 at the Musée d'Art Moderne de la Ville de Paris crowned her career however modest with regard to the uniqueness and the importance of the work.

It was not until several years after her death that her work began to arouse interest on its own, apart from its biographical and historical context. The creation of the Fondation Hans Hartung-Anna Eva Bergman in 1994 thus furnished exceptional material for research, rich with thousands of works and archives enabling the study of the impact and originality of her work. In addition to a number of monographic exhibitions organized in Norway, Germany, Sweden or in France (Musée Picasso in Antibes in 1995, Musée des Jacobins in Toulouse in 2000, etc.), exhibition curators such as Michael Tarentino (Event Horizon, Irish Museum of Modern Art, 1996) confronted her work to that of contemporary artists, pointing out its universal and timeless strength, and thus opening new perspectives through which one can discover her work today.

GALERIE JÉRÔME POGGI

The Jérôme Poggi Gallery essentially carries out a task of prospection orientated first of all towards young contemporary creation but also toward those figures already recognized, even historical, for whom it supports the process of recognition as much in economical, as in critical and historical spheres, linking economic and critical values within a globalequation where intellectual and economical speculation come to meet.

The Gallery was founded by Jérôme Poggi in 2009, and is originally based near Gare du Nord in Paris. The Gallery is opening a second space in Le Marais Paris, next to the Centre Pompidou. Jérôme Poggi is also director of «Objet de Production», a production and studies facility created in 2004, to make art appear within the society through private and public commissions as part of the New Patrons initiated by La Fondation de France

Convinced that profound mutations confronting the art world necessitate new tools of production, distribution and reflection, the Galerie Jérôme Poggi and Objet de Production have decided to become associates and thereby create a new hybrid tool, combining commercial and political, critical and pedagogical modes of action into a new economic model for contemporary art, enabling the exploration of potential innovation within a commercial enterprise of our times. Acting thus on all levels of artistic and cultural processes, the combined action of both institutions will enable investing in public as well as private sectors.
